On In This House, On This Morning, Wynton Marsalis said, "Some of it is introspective, some of it is praise, some of it is prayerful, and some of it is exotic. The whole service is a dialogue with God. We have a sermon in the middle of it called 'In the Sweet Embrace of Life' because it is performed in the spirit of jazz—we believe in life."

Just as it was performed and toured in churches nationwide 15 years ago, In This House, On This Morning at Jazz at Lincoln Center will be a spiritual and cultural event based on the traditional African-American church service with jazz and gospel influences. The composition has been hailed as extraordinary, breathtaking and profound.
